

Kathryn E. Wiley, Ph.D., is an assistant professor in the Department of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies in the School of Education at Howard University. She is an expert in school discipline, climate, and safety, with a focus on race and educational opportunity. She uses multiple methods and a historical lens to understand contemporary education policies in the context of longstanding, racialized inequalities.

Wiley's research has been published in the American Educational Research Journal, Review of Educational Research, Race Ethnicity and Education, and The Urban Review, among others.

An avid public scholar, she is passionate about education as a public good, one essential to a multiracial and economically just democracy. She is a member of the American Educational Research Association and recently served as a 2025 AERA Congressional Fellow.

She has a Ph.D. in Education Policy from the University of Colorado Boulder and is a proud community college graduate originally from Dayton, Ohio.
