

Chambi Chachage, Ph.D. is an assistant professor in the Department of African Studies at Howard University where he teaches courses on 'African Systems of Thought' and 'Introduction to Contemporary Africa'. He holds a PhD \(African Studies\) and AM (History) from Harvard University, an MSc (African Studies) from the University of Edinburgh, a BSocSci (Psychological Studies), and a BA Honors (African Studies) from the University of Cape Town (UCT). He was a graduate exchange program student at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst (UMASS-Amherst) and an International Scholar Research fellow at Stanford University.

Before joining the faculty at Howard University, he was an Carleton University where he taught courses on 'African Digital Humanities', 'African Socialism vis-à-vis Capitalism', 'The Great Lakes Region of Africa', and 'Introduction to African Studies'. He was also a Postdoctoral Fellow and Lecturer at Princeton University, where he taught courses on 'Critical African Studies', 'The Mother and Father Continent: A Global History of Africa', and 'Health, Race, and Power in Africa in the Digital Age.'

His articles have appeared on various online platforms such as Africa is a Country, Corona Times, African Arguments, [Africa at LSE \[London School of Economics\]](#), Pambazuka News, and [CODESRIA \[Council for the Development of Social Science Research in Africa\] Bulletin](#). He has published in journals such as the Review of African Political Economy \(ROAPE\), Development, African Sociological Review, and Business History Review \(BHR\).

With Annar Cassam, the former Assistant to the first President of Tanzania, he is the editor of Africa's Liberation: The Legacy of Nyerere. His forthcoming book entitled Africanizing Capital: Emergence of Black Entrepreneurs in Eastern Africa is expected to be published in 2026. He is also the founder of www.udadisi.com, a multimedia e-platform for critical views on African issues.