

Dominique Douglas Hendricks, D.B.A. is an administrator with nearly 15 years of professional experience. Dominique's career includes Theater, Production, Management, and Administration. She serves as the director of operations and events for the Chadwick A. Boseman College of Fine Arts and as a lecturer in the Department of Theatre Arts at Howard University. As a lecturer and mentor, she trains, guides, and influences students so that they can follow their passion and fulfill their dreams in the theater and film industries, as well as the non-profit and private sectors. In her capacity as the director, she assists with strategic planning, vision, operations, and events.

Prior to joining Howard University, Douglas served as the special assistant to the vice chairman Ambassador Richard Verma, offering executive and strategic support. She also served the role of office manager at The Asia Group, where she provided a vast scope of office and systematic support to the firm, as well as administrative support to the Chief Operating Officer. Prior to joining The Asia Group, she served as the office manager and administrative assistant to several companies in the customer service and retail industries. While at Novo Development, she handled various tasks from scheduling, payroll/ expenses, and building management as their administrative coordinator. She managed vendor contracts, accounting, and human resources as the office manager for a company in Virginia.

Additionally, Douglas' experience extends to program and event management. At THEARC she was awarded the opportunity to serve as their program coordinator and production manager, where she oversaw events, productions, and programming. Douglas has managed productions in many theaters- Lincoln Theater, Kennedy Center for Performing Arts, Ellington Theater, Durham Performing Arts Center, and more up and down the East Coast.

Douglas enjoys serving and helping others to see their vision come to fruition, educating and guiding others through the completion of their projects. She is an active volunteer. Douglas is married to Alvin Hendricks Jr. They have two sons- Artavion and Austin, and two daughters- Addyson and Aminah.

Douglas holds a Bachelor of Arts in Theater Administration (Education) from North Carolina Central University, a Master of Science in Administration in Non-profit Management from Trinity Washington University, and a Doctor of Business Administration from National University.
